

For millions of people around the world, flip-flops are the most accessible and affordable form of footwear, explained Erin Smith of Ocean Sole Africa, an NGO working to reduce beach waste by turning discarded flip-flops into art. The concept of Ocean Sole Africa began in the 1990s when women and children on Kiwayu, a small island just off the ...

We are a social enterprise, that upcycles washed up flip-flops found along the beaches and waterways in Kenya. Inspired by the toys children were making out of the flip-flop debris, Julie Church, the Ocean Sole Founder, encouraged their mothers to collect, wash, and cut the discarded flip-flops into colourful products to sell at local Kenyan Markets as another means of ...

For example, you can get a distinctive art piece made solely from flip-flops trash by Ocean Sole and send it as a gift to your business acquaintances. To be more specific, you can also get the company's signage or logo design replicated through flip-flop art and present it as a goodwill gesture while promoting environmental well-being.

Erin Smith at Ocean Sole AKA the Flip Flop Recycling Company, a social enterprise based in Nariobi, Kenya has been working to change this unfortunate reality for over two decades, by recycling washed up flip flops from the Indian Ocean and turning them into inherently unique pieces of colorful art. To increase awareness of the international ...

At Ocean Sole, we are a registered non-profit, whose mission is to clean polluted beaches and provide careers to Artisans in high-impact communities. ... In order to help save our planet, we host weekly beach cleanups, that protect the ocean from further damage caused by flip-flop and plastic pollution. Learn More People are the heart of our ...

Ocean Sole is a recycling company based in Kenya doing its part to make a difference. Creatively, ... turned into reality and the story around what is believed to be the only business of its kind began with the birth of Ocean Sole. Yearly, 400,000 flip-flops and sandals ...

Recycling 400,000 flip flops a year from the shores of Kenya, Ocean Sole is creatively changing that. The world's oceans are floating dumps for plastic. Recycling 400,000 flip flops a year from the shores of Kenya, Ocean Sole is creatively changing that. ... her idea for the start-up flip flop recycling company hatched, too. Church's eco ...

Visiting the Ocean Sole workshop for corporate events and team building activities promises an extraordinary and meaningful experience. Engaging in hands-on activities like creating sculptures from recycled flip-flops and crafting eco-friendly accessories fosters teamwork, creativity, and a shared sense of environmental responsibility, making it a perfect setting to strengthen bonds ...

Ocean sole flip flop recycling company

Those were the simple beginnings of Ocean Sole, a flip-flop art recycling company - and a solution in Africa to the global pollution problem. Now run by Erin Smith, Ocean Sole has developed into a social impact community, with more than 100 full-time employees in Kenya.

For 3.5 billion people living below the poverty line, the flip flop remains the most affordable form of footwear. And as a result, most of them end up in the ocean. Each year we aim to upcycle 1 million+ flip flops found washed up across the Kenyan beaches which ...

That is how FlipFlop Recycling Company was born. It later became known as Ocean Sole Ltd. Ocean Sole today operates from its Marula Studios office in the suburbs of Karen, with a workforce of over 100 artisans and casual workers. The team transforms the discarded flip flops into gorgeous works of art sold locally and abroad.

Ocean Sole "recycles" flip flops scavenged off the Kenyan beaches into unique fun animal sculptures. This is their new location which is both store and factory. They will give you a personal tour of the process from cleaning and sorting, to melding and carving, to smoothing and finishing. you can buy from their store or have something custom ...

Visiting the Ocean Sole workshop is a must for tourists, providing a captivating journey into the world of upcycled art and environmental conservation. Explore the workshop, learn about the flip-flop recycling process, and end the tour by visiting our shop, where you can find a wide array of unique and sustainable prod

In 2018 80 artisans have turned 750 thousand flip flop"s into masterful artworks big and small. Ranging from little keychain"s all the way up to life size giraffe and lion. Ocean Sole is Kenya based and originated from an idea to clean up beaches that were heavily polluted with plastics and flip flop"s. By turning these flip flop"s into ...

Web: <https://wholesalesolar.co.za>