The Rising was a primarily lowColor rebellion against the Society driven by the Sons of Ares, starting roughly in July 742 P.C.E. Although the Sons of Ares had been engaging in underground opposition to the Society for decades, the Rising began in earnest after the supposed execution of Darrow of Lykos and the subsequent reveal by the Sons of Ares that he was a former Red ...

Luna is the official name of Earth's moon to distinguish it from the moons of other planets that have been colonized by Gold. The moon is the capital of The Society and the seat of power for House Lune. After mankind expanded from Earth to Luna, Luna became the port through which it colonized the other planets and moons in the solar system. This was made possible by Luna's ...

And then there's Red Rising, where by restricting the universe to our solar system, it paradoxically feels bigger than those galaxy-spanning settings, because each world feels like a world. Mars alone has (or has had) multiple established cities in different biomes, wilderness, estates, oceans, an isolated civilization in its far reaches, a ...

What, a tiny little bit, redeems Red Rising is the occasional compelling turn of phrase. I've noted the opening lines of the first two books; in keeping with the general downhill trend, the third book has no such clever opening line, although the flyleaf map does bear the pithy legend, "The Solar System.

There are 14 castes, which each caste signified by their color, and each color signifies their ranking in the system, as well as their "job" in the society. When the first colonists ventured forth from Earth to make their home on the moon, they created a hierarchy for labor.

Phobos means "fear"; In mythology, he was the son of Aphrodite and Ares, the fruit of love and war. It is an appropriate name for the largest of Mars' moons. Phobos is the innermost and largest of the moons of Mars. Phobos was formed long before the age of man, when a meteorite struck father Mars and flung debris into orbit. There it floated like a castoff corpse, dead and ...

The Conquering is the event that spawned The Society and solidified Luna as the core power in the Solar System. Luna declared its independence from Earth, and the spheres waged war on each other. The forces of Luna won out, and eventually, the Golds of this generation were called the "Iron Golds". The main powers at the time of The Conquering were the Indian Empire, ...

The Alliance: Started with a single rebel organization, the Sons of Ares, and grew overtime as more parties pledged their support.; Icon of Rebellion: Two: the spiked war helmet of Ares, and Darrow's signature slingBlade; The Revolution Will Not Be Vilified: Downplayed. Members of the Rising have had to do some unsavory things in order to keep the rebellion alive or bring about ...

The Society is the Solar System's dominant human government. It has ruled for over 700 years, holding sway over the lives of at least 14 generations of Humanity. Its people are separated into different "Colors," indicating both caste and vocation. Proponents of the Society consider it to be the most effective and perfect government ever devised by Man. Prior to The Rising, The ...

Io is the smallest and closest of the Galilean moons orbiting Jupiter, and the primary source of food production for The Rim with its large farming colonies. Before the Red Rising saga, Io subsisted mainly by trading with the Core of the Society. "This moon is a hateful little horror, but through ingenuity, through will, we made it ours." -- Romulus au Raa[1] Io is slightly larger than ...

terraformed, the planet consisted of two main continents, Helios and Boraelis, separated by multiple seas. The planet is home to temperate coasts, mountains, hot springs, cool valleys, and coral growths in the seas. In order to achieve this during terraforming, The Society ...

This is just calculations to assume more or less the population of the planets and organizations in the Solar System. Do, at Iron Gold is mentioned that the Society has 18 billion people. At some point Mars is mentioned as having 4 billion Reds (for matter of my own sanity we will assume that counts the moons) with Luna having 1 billion ...

Red Rising by Pierce Brown imagines a far future where humanity has spread across the solar system. There's just one problem: a rigid, color-coded caste system ensures the constant oppression of those at the bottom for the benefit of those at the top.

The Color system of the Society originally was a caste system created by early humans on Earth to create order when first colonizing the Moon. It is also a form of social hierarchy improved upon by the early Golds during their conquering of the Solar System. It divides Humanity into fourteen distinct "Colors." Originally the "Colors" were native Earth human beings who simply wore ...

Earth is the third innermost planet in the Solar System and the origin of mankind, and did not require terraforming. Eventually, it was conquered by the colony it sent to Luna, its sole satellite. It has stayed under The Society's rule since its establishment, and is considered part of the Core. Two Earth-born families (presumably of ancient and powerful blood) were wiped out during the ...

Heliopolis is the second richest city on Mercury, located on the continent of Helios. It rests south of the Hesperides Mountains, east of the Bay of Sirens leading to the Caliban Sea, and north of an unnamed mountain chain on the south of Helios. It is also home to the system-famous Hippodrome. The terrain is said to be similar to that of South Pacifica. In mid-November of 753 ...
