Hydrogen evolution and dendrite growth severely plague the implementation of aqueous zinc-ion batteries. The electrolyte regulation strategy is powerful to alleviate the excrescent reactions of the electrolyte to Zn anode. However, there lacks effective electrolyte approaches for regulating stable and reversible Zn plating/stripping chemistry.

For capacitive energy storage at elevated temperatures^{1,2,3,4}, dielectric polymers are required to integrate low electrical conduction with high thermal conductivity. The coexistence of these seemingly contradictory properties remains a persistent challenge for existing polymers. We describe here a class of ladderphane copolymers exhibiting more than one order of magnitude ...
